Labor Party Spokesman Hits Stand of Ernest Bevin

By JOSEPH STAROBIN

British public opinion rose to fever-pitch last night over the intervention in Greece, as James Griffth, Labor Party Executive spokesman took issue with Ernest Bevin, the government's minister of labor, and promised that the Labor Party would not stand behind Gen. Ronald M. Scobie's demand for unconditional surrender from the Greek partisans.

In arguing for the Executive's resolution, which called for an immediate armistice in Greece but did not attack the government completely, Griffth declared:

"We want an armistice with the ELAS and not unconditional surrender. This means agreement between the parties concerned—not an ultimatum."

Only after Griffth spoke, indicating a rift in the government coalition over Scobie's arrogant demands of Tuesday, did the conference agree to pass the Executive's resolution by a vote of 2,550,000 to 1,137,000.

BEVIN'S SLANDER

Griffth's position helped to offset the ugly impression created by Ernest Bevin, minister of labor, and a labor leader, who a tempted to associate the United States and the Soviet Union in responsibility for Churchill's present course.

Bevin declared that "Russia undertook to stabilize Romania. We undertook the main problem in Greece in accordance with this agreement with Russia, Proposals regarding Greece were submitted to Mr. Roosevelt and were initialled by him."

Bevin's crude attempt to bolster his own complete identification with Churchill's policy was denied by State Department informants in Washington.

According to United Press, these circles declared that the Quebec decision last September did not anticipate in any way the present attack on the ELAS and the EAM.

Obviously "stabilization of Romania" by the Soviet Union has nothing in common with the attack upon the patriotic population which is now being carried out in Greece.

Meanwhile, some of London's leading newspapers increased their attack on Chur

Greek Patriots Penetrate British Barracks in Athens

Undaunted Greek partisans of the ELAS bombarded the government's barracks in the shrinking center of Britishheld Athens yesterday, and the fiercest fighting of the 10-day struggle raged all day within 1,500 yards of the Great Britain Hotel, where Gen. Ronald M. Scobie and his Greek aides are located.

Spurning Scobie's demand that they give up their arms prior to any change of British policy, ELAS units scaled a 10-foot wall and stormed through the government barracks.

Only a determined counter-action by reinforced British troops, assisted by Spitfire planes and heavy tanks, saved the military compound.

Fighting raged with the quisling Mountain Brigade and British units in western Athens, and the official British communique admitted that the capital's port of Piraeus had still not been taken from the ELAS forces.

Dock workers were on strike in Salonika in the northeast corner of Greece, and Gen. Scobie declared that reinforcements for the Athenian fighters were still streaming in from the countryside.

Launching a new assault on British positions in battle-scarred Athens, the ELAS forces of the Greek National Liberation Front (EAM) gained new ground yesterday and broke into the government barracks. A fierce counterattack by reinforced British troops finally saved their garrison. But the ELAS forces stepped up their offensive throughout the center of Athens, while other reports from the capital port of Piraeus indicated the ELAS were still holding their positions there.

DETAILED FACTS

Europe (FOARE)

Associated Press reports, cited by FOARE as examples of the mounting wave of executions in Spain, tell of the shooting in Marruecos on Aug. 21, 1944, of six "Spanish Communist leaders" who had been arrested in May, 1943;

FOARE receives information direct from Spain by clandestine channels. One letter told of torture in the police commissariats and in the offices of the Director General of Security.

"Apart from the already classic methods of torture, they use electric current and special whips applied to bare feet and legs. N. N. (a girl) suffered this martyrdom and saw it used on X. X. (another girl). During the recent arrests in Valencia they whipped prisoners to the point of breaking off fingers and feet. In the same police station they killed a young man this way."

A cable from London to FOARE dated Oct. 19 said: "Madrid communicates that police activity, aided by the Gestapo, is increasing furiously against the defens less patriots. There have been numerous arrests in Madrid during the last few days, and the whereabouts of most prisoners is unknown. Among them are some priests suspected of having made common cause with the movement of national unity."

Refuting the claim by Franco's Ministry of Justice on Nov. 28 that only 22,989 prisoners were still held, FOARE's informant inside Spain reveals:

"There are some 110 prisons in the country, all major, with an average of prison population of 1,500. It is not excessive to estimate that, together with forced labor, there are some 200,000 prisoners, possibly more. Apart from prisons counted among the 110, there are an infinity of others of lesser importance.

After detailing the terrible conditions in the prisons and forced labor battalions, FOARE concludes:

"A merciless struggle against terror in Spain must be waged by all democratic, progressive organizations of the Americas, England, France, Italy, Belgium-all free lands, all lands liberated from the fascist hydra."

Urge FDR Veto Security Freeze

The CIO Shipbuilders Port Council of New York, representing 50,000 shipyard workers, yesterday wired President Roosevelt urging him to veto the bill passed by Congress which would freeze the Social Security tax.

At the same meeting, council delegates wired Secretary of State Edward Stettinius congratulating him on his stand for self-government in liberated nations.

"If the social security plan of our country is to meet the demands of a heavier burden in the coming years, it would require the added tax schedule to go into effect this January," the Council told the President.

The Senate Hearings

THE most important outcome of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee hearings, in our opinion, was the excellent six-point program enunciated by Mr. Stettinius. The new Secretary of State made it plain that he is devoted to the President's policies as a whole-"a liberal and forward-looking foreign policy" to be carried out "with level-headed and business-like effectiveness." That is what the country voted for and what it expects of Mr. Stettinius and his associates.

The hearings have produced no world-shaking revelations. Attempts by reactionary die-hards, such as Hiram Johnson, to question our foreign policy as a whole were deftly countered by Stettinius himself; while the question ing of each proposed assistant secretary revealed little that was not known before. Mr. Grew still brings with him all the apologetics for the pre-war diplomacy toward Japan which we expected from a conservative of his caliber. His tentative attitude toward the ultimate fate of the Japanese mikado is significant only because it is so tentative; in fact, the Japanese Liberation Alliance, which is trying to rally Japanese prisoners of war in China against their own imperialism, also postpones for the present any definitive stand toward the monarchy as an institution. Mr. Dunn characteristically hides behind a mistaken policy toward Republican Spain which he helped formulate. Archibald MacLeish, on the other hand, reaffirms his well-known support of Spanish democracy. And Mr. Clayton reveals himself to be the "articulate and intelligent spokesman for capitalist conservatism," as PM at last discovered.

We need not state our own feelings on the past record of some of these men. It would be easy to object to any of them as individuals. But they have been presented to the country as a team, dedicated to the new policies of the United States and not the old ones. They bring their faults with them, but they will function under the President in the context of completely new world relations. There was no way of rejecting any one of them without rejecting the reorganization as a whole, and leaving a field-day for a most reckless assault upon our new policies in a critical time. And that is why we felt that no fight should be made on the issue as presented by the old-line Republicans or the palpitating

Our policy as a whole is good, and that is more decisive than the limitations of the men who are compelled to carry it out. Many serious contradictions remain. On these specific issues-such as Spain or Greece or China -we believe in the people's participation so that our country may help advance victory over fascism in harmony with the great objectives of the United Nations.

Catch and Punish the Criminals!

OVERS of justice and haters of fascist attitudes toward women have forced from the governor and the attorney general of Alabama the assurance of an investigation in the case of Mrs. Recy Taylor. Mrs. Taylor, young Negro wife and mother, has been pleading vainly for justice since that night, more than three months ago, when she was abducted, stripped of her clothing and raped by a gang of white ruffians near Abbeville, Ala.

Ignoring the reactionary South's well-known sentiment that the persecution of Negroes is its own affair, progressive persons and organizations everywhere are making the Taylor case their affair. They are taking the correct position that, left to the state of Alabama, nothing would be done to change the truth of Mrs. Taylor's cry that "nobody is saying anything about it and nobody is doing anything about it.'

Progressives in New York, through the initiative of the Daily Worker, organized the Committee for Equal Justice for Mrs. Recy Taylor, with Assemblyman Hulan Jack as treasurer and its address as 112 E. 19 St. They prodded Gov. Chauncy Sparks and Attorney General William McQueen with resolutions, letters and telegrams into promising "a complete and thorough investigation."

The committee, now arranging a conference to hear a first-hand report from its investigator, just returned from Alabama, sees in the fight for justice for Mrs. Taylor a means of undermining the rotting foundation. which supports the degradation of all Negro women. There is every reason why this fight should develop into a movement to lift the economic and social status of American women in general. For we must remember that white women, no less than black women, are outraged by such fascist attitudes toward their sex.

New 'Friends' for Common Man

WASHINGTON.

T IS really wonderful to behold how the cause of the common man is making converts in the United States Senate. Only yesterday, or so it seems, Happy Chandler, the glib little Pacific Firster, was voting to override the President's vetoes of that tax bill for the relief of the greedy and of the Smith-Connally bill to sock organized labor.

But now it looks as if the junior Senator from Kentucky has seen the light or something. Maybe he has been reading PM. Anyway this is what he told the Senate in urging that the President's recent State Department nominations be sent back to the Foreign Relations Committee for further hearings:

"Mr. President, I sometimes wonder who won the election which we recently held. I was told that the poor folks would be given opportunities as the result of the election, and it was said that the common man would be given a better chance . . . Instead of poor folks obtaining jobs, the Wall Street boys are obtaining jobs, and we are clearing everything with Harry Hopkins."

But the real radical in that Senate debate was Senator Burton K. Wheeler of Montana, who has for years been a bitter-end opponent of most of the administration's progressive domestic measures as well as of its foreign policy. Wheeler has been more disillusioned even than Happy Chandler since the election.

"We now have what is supposed to be a great liberal administration," Wheeler said. "Someone has said that it was an administration of the common people, or of the poor people. Yet, we know that the heads of all the various departments are representatives of the big business interests of the country." A Job Of

Undermining

Now it doesn't take a master mind to figure that since both Wheeler and Chandler are opposed right down the line to the Administration's entire program of international collaboration, they naturally don't want to see the national unity which the President is trying to achieve behind this program. And so they raise the demagogic cry that big business is taking over the government. They try to undermine popular confidence in the State Department.

But it was more than a little surprising when staunch Administration men in the Senate fell for this kind of stuff. Even Jim Murray of Montana. He is a pretty rich man himself, and knows in terms of his own experience that there is room for businessmen in the coalition around the President. After Wheeler finished his little talk, Murray, who has long been at opposite poles from Wheeler in state and national politics, said probably for the first time in many years: "I fully agree with the observations of my colleague.'

As a result of the unnatural coalition which sent the State Department nominations back to the Foreign Relations Committee, there has come the biggest show of the lame duck session. Ali the paraphernalia common to such occasions has been trotted out. The caucus room in the Senate office building, resplendent with marble-lined walls and hanging crystal chandeliers, has been crowded with Senators, newspaper men, photographers, newsreel men and just curious onlookers.

I can see where Bert Wheeler and Bob Taft and the rest of that crew are delighted with the threering circus. But I wonder what consolation Jim Murray and Bob Wagner of New York get out of it.

Greek Crisis Needs Limelight

The furor over the State Department appointments would have been bad enough in view of

By Adam Lapin the post-election need for consolidating support around the President's program. It is little short of a calamity that it comes at this time when the fate of democracy in Europe may well be decided by what this government and public opinion in this country do about the Greek situation.

Instead of giving our new Secretary of State the backing he deserves for his stand on Greece and Italy, many liberals in Congress and outside it are stewing around about the appointment of William L. Clayton as an assistant secretary.

One of the liberals interested in the Clayton affair assured me that for every wrod he put in about this case on Capitol Hill he also said something about the need for acting on Greece. Well, maybe so. But I don't think it can be reasonably argued that the Clayton affair has not detracted from Congressional and public attention to the great struggle for democracy in Greece.

I wonder whether it has occurred to some of those who would shun so virtuously any alliance with Clayton as part of the Roosevelt coalition that they have at least temporarily become part of a different coalition, a coalition with men like Chandler, Wheeler and Taft.

If there is any lesson to be learned from the unhappy circus on Capitol Hill, it is that administration forces will have to be welded together in a much more cohesive team if there are not to be serious set-backs at the next session of Congress despite the great election gains. This could be done more easily if some liberals were not so eager to agree with Happy Chandler and to assume that the common man lost the elections.

Worth Repeating

LE DRAPEAU ROUGE, the Belgian Communist underground per at the time of the Nazi occupation, is described in the London Daily Worker of Nov. 20, just reaching America: Daily, sturdy Flemish women would walk to market, from street to street, from villages to village, with bundles of papers smuggled with ordinary household things they carried with them-bags of poultry food, salt, packets of cotton wool, tolls of cloth.

Le Drapeau Rouge first appeared secretly in 1940 after the German invasion. The Communist paper, "Voice of the People," had been closed down before by the Pierlot Government, who confiscated the presses, arrested the editor and the entire leadership of the paper and sent them to concentration camps in France. But Le Drapeau Rouge came out to strengthen the Communist call to resist the Germans. It not only sounded the eall to action for the Belgian people, it began to teach them how to fight.

Today's Guest Column

THE tragic and dangerous events which have lately occurred in Italy, Belgium and Greece—and Churchill's intervention policy which has given rise to them-have direct bearing on the colonial question. The man who said that he did not intend to

"preside over the liquidation of the British Empire" would logically strive to retain or place in power in countries which lie along England's imperial life-line -Portugal, Spain, Italy and Greece - governments with which the British Empire has been in the habit of doing business.

Maintenance of the British Empire involves the maintenance of other empires. Hence, except with regard to Italy's former colonies, and in the joint Allied statement at the Cairo conference regarding Japan's empire, the British government during the war has carefully refrained from the slightest hint of any change in the pre-war status of the colonial world.

While conceding the desirability of regional collaboration in colonial matters on a purely consultative and advisory basis, the Colonial Office in London has thus far been very cool toward proposals of some form of international administrative responsibility for all colonial territories directed toward guaranteeing self-government. In maintaining the position of "holding our own," the British government has given the cue to other European colonial powers, including Italy, to do likewise. Among those powers, France is the only one which has up to now given real evidence of realizing that colonial peoples, too, have a stake in this war of liberation. The Dutch government-in-exile has made pronouncements of a new colonial policy, but it has yet to show that it means what it says. In contrast with the governments-in-exile which reposed safely in London, the leaders of French resistance, in order to survive and carry on the war, began applying a new progressive policy in French African territories even before the formal statement of that policy was issued at the Brazzaville conference in February of this year.

THE important point to note here is that it was the resistance forces, the democratic strength of France, which accomplished this change in the concept of the French empire, and which has brought about France's remarkably quick recovery as a ranking European power-notwithstanding Gen. Smut's gloomy prophecy of a year ago. These same democratic forces of resistance must now be permitted to come to the front in other European countries. That is the essential prerequisite for real postwar stability and security for Europe and the world-far more important than any momentary illusions of "law and order."

Our State Department has taken that stand. So also has the Soviet Union. And dark as the picture of British policy at the moment is, it must be remembered that the vote of confidence given Churchill last week by no means represented the British public's approval of that policy. Even the conservative London Times, after the confidence vote, continued to attack Churchill's position.

EVERYONE realizes that there are strong imperialist forces still active in Britain (and in the United States also). What is not generally understood is that these reactionary forces in England are able to gain some support in Parliament because of the belief that only by holding on to the empire and the special trade advantages thus afforded (fallacious though such thinking may be), can Britain compete with America in postwar trade. Only through frank discussion and settlement of this issue can we avoid further crises and set-backs.

The wisdom of President Roosevelt in urging the speediest possible realization of the Dumbarton Oaks proposals—not waiting for the end of the war-is today more evident than ever. The Teheran declaration still remains the guide-post of all democratic peoples. The Allies must continue to function together as as coalition with fullest consultation and agreement not simply on the strategy of the war and the specific problems of liberated countries but on the larger questions of the peace. Only as the larger questions—and that of colonies is one of them-are solved, will the day-to-day issues cease to loom repeatedly

Fruits of Labor Disunity Are Very Sour

The AFL's renewed campaign to twist the National Labor Relations Board against the CIO in favor of craft unions and the effort to amend the Wagner Act for that purpose, promises to become another boomerang. As even some AFL leaders warned at the Metal Trades Department convention in New Orleans, this may prove to be a "Pandora Box."

The same holds in relation to the sweep of state laws against labor that are becoming a very serious menace. The labor draft issue, too, has been revived. -But in addition to these defensive situations, there are a whole series of new objectives common for both the AFL and CIO, that may not be reached if some understanding is not arrived at between them soon. The entire postwar perspective, an extensive administration-supported social security program, reconversion policy and relations with the veterans are affected.

If one merely reads the proceedings of the CIO and AFL conventions, the difference is so great that a conclusion would seem almost inevitable that collaboration is impossible. But the difference was just as wide on election policy. Still, the members of both organizations voted, essentially, the same. The CIO stressed this very fact in its unity resolution and called for "collaboration" in the very fields where it is most immediately and urgently needed. This proposal, which is certainly realizable as it was in earlier stages of the war, could be given substance if the same groundswell for unity sweeps through the membership of the AFL now as was shown

White Collar Workers Are in Bad Way

Manhattan Editor, Daily Worker:

In analyzing the national election results, your paper correctly stated that a great deal more educational work was needed among the farmers. There is one particular urban group that is also especially susceptible to the misleading propaganda of demagogues such as Dewey-that is the white collar workers with the fixed incomes such as the policeman, fireman, utility employes, bank employes, teachers and other such workers of large corporations as the telephone, gas and electric companies. These employes have suffered terribly since the war began as a result of (1) the inflation and (2) being poorly unionized.

In consequence, any of them have developed a nostalgia for the "good-old Hoover days when prices were low and we had secure jobs with steady incomes." Of course, basically such reasoning is false yet unless something is done to better the economic status of these white collar workers, they will continue to be preyed upon the fascists and men like Father Coughlin. As a white collar worker, I have seen my own economic status sink deeper with each day of the war. It is therefore terribly important that a progressive paper such as the Daily Worker continue to expose the plight of these workers.

The way the editorials in the Daily Mirror are printed are an example of what I mean. Views On Labor News

THE fruits of labor division are very sour. But it seems that we are in for a lot of such fruit if the seemingly wide gap between the AFL and CIO isn't bridged.

Not much notice was taken of the latest development that should be charged up to labor disunity, but its impact may be more serious than is apparent on the surface. I refer to the War Labor Board's announcement that so-called independent unions will be given representation on three more important committees in the WLB machinery.

There are some really independent unions. Representation for them was never a real issue. Not even John L. Lewis, who is certainly not a friend of the WLB, ever claimed that his side was not represented properly when a mine case was before the board.

The unions in question are the company unions that have been properly dressed up with the expert advice of special lawyers in this field, so they could technically pass under the Wagner Act. Most of those organizations are more interested in fighting the CIO and AFL than in the welfare of their members or in advancing the basic interests of workers in general. To include them in the WLB machinery as labor representatives is more often giving employers extra representation

by George Morris

THE worst collection of these groups are affiliates of the Confederated Unions of America, an outfit headed by Matt Smith, secretary of the Mechanics Educational Society of America. WLB representation will be another talking point for these unions in their claim for legality and recognition. Combined with the preference the employers give them, they will undoubtedly have a further advantage in their effort to substitute CIO or AFL unionism.

Incidentally, according to the Bureau of Labor Statistics analysis of time lost in strikes for 1943, 73.3 percent was due to walkouts of organizations that were neither CIO nor AFL. Those groups have less than a tenth of the combined CIO-AFL membership. Giving them representation is like appeasing their disruptive designs.

The question of representation for these groups has been pending for many months. It is perhaps not an accident that the WLB's announcement comes now, as CIO-AFL relations are at a low point.

DEVELOPMENT of dressed up company unionism bodes no good for organized labor. Reactionary employers have always been interested in a "third labor movement." Even those who are hoping for a union-busting campaign when the firing ceases, admit that unions are here to stay. But that doesn't exclude substitutes for CIO or AFL unions.

for the President. under a false pretense. What we see in the WLB is only a sample.

Greek-Americans Protest British Attack

Following are excerpts from the memorandum condemning British attacks on Greek patriots submitted Monday to Lord Halifax, British Ambassador to the United States, by representatives of outstanding Greek American associations. The organizations represented included: Athenian Society of New York, the Piraikos Society of New York, the Cretan Association Omonoia of New York, the Greek Athletic Club Hermes, the Greek American Committee for National Unity, the Food Workers Union, AFL, Locals 6 and 89, the Committee of the Federation of Greek Societies of New York, the Greek Fur Workers Union Local 70, CIO, the Greek Seamen's Union and the Greek American Labor Com-

OUTRAGED by the British government's intervention in Greek internal affairs, our delegation wishes to lodge a vigorous protest with the British Embassy against the attempt to impose by force of foreign arms a government opposed to the will of the Greek people.

The British armed forces today are fighting the people who freed Greece from the fasclais. The Greek people under the leadership of the National Liberation Front fought the common enemy and liberated their land from the invader. When British troops arrived, so complete was the job of liberation done by the EAM and its military units, the ELAS. that the British suffered only insignificant casualties.

Prime Minister Churchill declares the ELAS are bands of gangsters. This is neither true nor just. Gangsters do not struggle for four years in bitter difficulties, without food, without shoes, with small arms to achieve the liberation of their homeland.

THE British government declares the EAM seeks a communist dictatorship in Greece. That also is false. That is the slander of the Berlin that sits uneasily in the mouth of the British government. The EAM is the broadest coalition of democratic forces that Greece has ever known. It includes the Agrarian Party, the Union of Popular Democracy, the Railwaymen's Union and the General Confederation of Labor, Socialists, Communists, bishops, poets and professorsand even former monarchists.

Gangsterism and attempts at dictatorship do not stem from the EAM—they stem from armed foreign intervention which backs a small group of native fascists, reactionaries and quisling collaborators. For example, the British refused to permit Liberal Party leader Themistocles Sophoulis to form a new cabinet embracing all parties from left to right who had agreed to serve in a coalition with him. Mr. Soupoulis is a known conservative. All political factions, however, asked him to form a new government in order to stop the bloodshed and resolve the crisis.

"COMMUNISM" and "anarchy" are not the issues in the Greek crisis. The issues are: the right of peoples who have fought for their liberation to determine their own national destinies; the eradication of fascism from the fabric of national life in every country leaving no seeds of future catastrophes for humanity; the speedy concentrations of all armed effort not against allies but the real enemy-the fascists-so that the war can be finished as quickly as possible; the honoring of Allied agreement from the Atlantic Charter to Teheran.

We call upon the British government to change it policy immediately, to cease its armed attack upon the democratic people of Greece, to cease its bloody attempt to shackle the Greek people once more with dictatorship. There is still the great job of winning the war before us all. We urge the British government to abandon terrorism and to honor its agreements so that the war may not be prolonged or the peace torpedoed in advance. MOSCOW, Dec. 13.-The reconstituted trade union movement of liberated Poland has voted to participate in the world labor conference in February, it was reported last week by Nikolai Alexeyev, prominent Soviet labor journalist.

Writing in Trud, organ of the All-Union Central Council of Trade Unions, Alexeyev asserts that the problems of international labor unity have aroused great interest among the Polish trade unionists.

Expressions of this, he adds, are the recent messages sent by the Formation of a Polish Provisional Provisional Central Trade Union

Trade union locals now exist in every liberated province, the Soviet writer states. Trades councils are functioning in all large districts and the railwaymen and sugar refinery workers have established centers to direct the work of their locals throughout the liberated territory.

As a result of the correctness of the course pursued by the Negro people they have made great advances and they have becme one of the strongest sources of democratic strength in the country. They have understood that securing equal rights was inseparable from winning the war. The Negro people are justly proud of their contribution to the country's war, and so must be all sections of the democratic coalition in the nation. This is what attaches so much importance to the figures released by the War Department. A full understanding of this by wider sections of the peoples is necessary fr: further strengthening national unity to win the war.

PROBLEMS STILL UNSOLVED

There are still unsolved and pressing problems. The most glaring is segregation in the armed forces and injustices to Negro soldiers. And these grievances must be wiped out. It is inconcervable that in a total of 700,000 Negro soldiers there are only 5,0000 commissioned officers. There are too few Negro troops in combat arms of the service and they are grieved about this. Certainly the figures given of the number of Negroes in the medical, nursing corps and other auxiliary services are insignificant.

Certainly the treatment of the nineteen dishonorably discharged Negro Seabees is unfair and a disgrace. What is still more disturbing are the court-martial findings men on the west coast and court-martial of the Negro soldiers at Seattle. All printed information about these trials show bias. The solution of all these problems is the conclusion to be drawn from the figures released by the War Department in the interest of national unity to win the war.

Joe Williams Muffs Chance at Pegler's Job

Nat Low

Joe (I wanna be a Pegler) Williams is still an aspirant for the job. It seems he muffed his chance at replacing Poison Pen in the pages of the World-Telegram, which used to be a newspaper, I am told.

A few months ago, when Pegler wound up in his natural and native habitat, the Hearst zoo, Williams was given a crack at the job left open by the transfer. His life-long ambition seemed to be on the verge of achievement, but after a three-month trial the editors of the Scripps-Howard papers decided Williams was a better sports writer than he was a "political commentator." So after a while Williams' by-line disappeared from the feature page and resumed its spot on the sports page and—frankly I don't know if this is good news or not.

Lt. Cmdr. Benny Leonard is walking around with a big happy smile this morning after being informed that he had been awarded the Eddie Neil Award by the New York Boxing Writers Association, annually voted to the man who has done most for the game.

Leonard has done a magnificent job in this war as a recreation and morale officer at the Sheepshead Bay Training Station of the Maritime Service. Leonard was promoted to his job after Commander Clair Bee was moved up to full command of the post of Sheepshead Bay.

Carroll Widdoes, young coach of Ohio State's unbeaten eleven, was voted the "Coach of the Year" by the annual poll taken by the World-Telegram and announced yesterday. The 41-year-old mentor replaced Paul Brown when he went into the armed services. Widdoes was one of the few major coaches who had to work with entirely civilian material and although he was aided by such all-American vets as Les Horvath and Bill Willis, he kept the kids at a high peak for game after game-and he had one of typically tough Big Ten schedules.

As was to be expected, Earl Blaik of Army won second place for, as one coach put it, "made the best use of tremendous material" and that, too, is an art.

The Rangers just haven't got it, it seems. Ever since this season began New York hockey fans have been hoping the revamped Blueshirt would be capable of getting into the playoffs. But after almost two months of play they have been able to account for only two victories and four ties. Tuesday night they lost another to Boston, 7-5, and as if that wasn't bad enough they also lost the services of Ants Atanas, who ran into Jack Shewchuck and had to be carried from the ice, ice cold.

Wait till next year, shall we?

Mike Jacobs has another near sell-out on his hands Friday night when the Johnny Greco-Bobby Ruffin return match will be fought out. The two welters put on the best bout of the year three weeks ago and it was natural that an encore be had. Jacobs, ever the one to please the customer, immediately put both boys under contract and here they are again.

The best he can do Friday is to repeat his first performance—and, frankly, we don't think he can even do that.

Unlimited Night Ball Voted

ously banned all football from their parks until all home games have been played.

Following the precedent set last year in July, the majors granted permission for any club to play night ball at any time except on Sundays and holidays providing the visiting team approves. No dates were set for the start of night baseball and if desired any club may open its season with a night game. The measure was passed for one year, but indications were that it would be extended again next year if the war is not over. The football resolution provided that the major leagues would not enter into any agreement permitting use of a baseball park for footbalk purposes on any date before all officially scheduled home games have been played or if the am in question remains a pos-

The Veteran Commander

THE SEVENTH CATCHES UP

W/ITH the Ninth, First and Third American armies lined up along the Roer, Saar and the gap between the Saar and the Moder, the American Seventh Army, having taken possession of Haguenau, is advancing toward the point where the French-German border joins the Rhine near Lauterburg, southwest of Karlsruhe. The Germans will probably offer a stiffened resistance on the Bitche - Wissemburg - Lauterburg line and their retreat in this sector at present really means that they are abandoning a useless forefield and are falling back on the western zone of the Sigefried Line in keeping with the situation further to the northwest where the same German action is apparent.

It would seem to us (without any concrete facts to support the idea) that now that the slugging match on the Roer and Saar has developed into a long drawn battle of attrition and now that the port of Antwerp has been in use for at least two weeks, it does look probable, or at least possible, that Field Marshal Montgomery will soon go into action on the Venlo-Arnhem sector.

SOVIET troops have captured the powerful strongpoint and multpile road and railroad junction of Godoelloe, 10 miles northeast of Budapest and are pressing their ring closer and closer to Pest.

No action has been reported from southwest and north of the city, but it is probable that preparations for the crossing of the Danube near Vac are being made by Malinovsky while Tolbukhin is regrouping for a thrust through the Balaton-Danube gap.

To the northeast Soviet troops are crashing forward from Miskolc and are about to clear all northern Hungary. This puts the Germans in eastern Slovakia in a most difficult position. They now have only one major rail line for the evacuation of the Koscice-Przeszov area. (This is the line running west from Koscice to Zilina and from there northwest to Breslau, southwest to Bratislava and west to Prague.)

(Yesterday was the third anniversary of the issuance of the first Soviet victory communique, Dec. 13, 1941, when it was announced that the German encirclement maneuver against Moscow had failed. It is a long, long way from Moscow to Budapest.)

MERICAN planes destroyed another 11-ship Japanese convoy off Leyte and the enemy lost about 50 planes defending it. Generally speaking, the situation on Leyte is progressing favorably, but it is not as near final victory as would tend to indicate.

B-29s blasted the industrial center of Nagoya after feinting toward Tokyo and upsetting the enemy AA defenses. Nagoya is said to be one of the most inflammable Japanese cities. Our Superforts made their bomb runs over Nagoya into the wind which slowed their speed over the target and probably increased their accuracy.

In China the situation on the Kweichow-Kwangsi border seems temporarily improved. However, the enemy boasts that he now has a direct land route clear from Manchukuo to Singapore, and this, after all, was the Japanese main strategic objective in the current offensive.
